

The Times in Print for Tuesday, July 05, 2011

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL

Jump to: Front Page | International | National | Obituaries | Editorials, Op-Ed and Letters | New York | Business Day | Sports Tuesday | The Arts | Science Times | Corrections |

THE FRONT PAGE

Pakistan's Spies Tied to Slaying of a Journalist

By JANE PERLEZ and ERIC SCHMITT

Intelligence showed that senior officials of the spy agency directed the attack on a journalist in an effort to silence criticism, two senior administration officials said.

Pay Frozen, More New York Judges Leave Bench

By WILLIAM GLABERSON

The state's judges, who have not had a raise in 12 years, are resigning in relatively large numbers, not to retire but to return to practicing law.

A City's Wrenching Budget Choices

By KEVIN SACK

Officials in Wilmington, N.C., tried to create a budget that addressed the city's needs while being sensitive to sentiment against raising taxes.

Interactive Feature: Balancing Wilmington's Budget Slide Show: A Southern Port City Tightens Its Belt

Hackers Select a New Target: Other Hackers

By SOMINI SENGUPTA and NICK BILTON

In a fractious free-for-all, rival hackers engage in tit-for-tat attacks on each other, often for no better reason than to outwit the other guy.

Hackers Commandeer a Fox News Twitter Account

Time in House Could Be Short for Republican Newcomers

By JENNIFER STEINHAUER

At least half a dozen potential primary challengers are considering a run, and there is heated chatter about more.

Health Care Cuts Proposed in Budget Negotiations

Who's on the Family Tree? Now It's Complicated

By LAURA M. HOLSON

The once-simple concept of a family tree has grown complicated in the wake of sperm donations, surrogate mothers, adoptions and relationships outside wedlock.

Post a Comment | Read (105)

Podcast: Front Page

James Barron, a reporter at The New York Times, summarizes the top headlines every weekday.

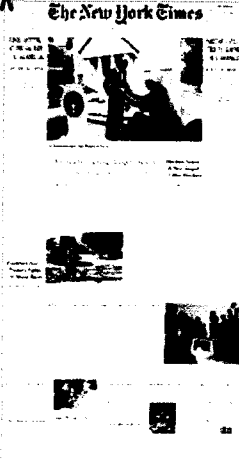

How to Subscribe

Today's Front Pages

NYT - New York Edition

Enlarge This Image

NYT - National Edition

IHT - Europe

IHT - Asia

Quotation of the Day

"I never expected to get rich as a judge, but I never expected to get poor either."

ROBERT A. SPOLZINO, who resigned two years ago as an appellate judge in New York, where judges have not had a pay increase for 12 years.

The Times in Print

FROM THE PAST 7 DAYS

S	M	T	W	T	F	S
26	27	28	29	30	1	2
3	4	5	6	7	8	9

ENTER KEYWORD OR DATE

e.g. April 21, 2001

Jump to: Front Page | International | National | Obituaries | Editorials, Op-Ed and Letters | New York | Business Day | Sports Tuesday | The Arts | Science Times | Corrections |

INTERNATIONAL

For Chávez, a Triumphant Homecoming
By SIMON ROMERO

Back to Top

SECTION A - PAGE 4