Subject: FOLLOW-UP: NEWS LEAD: "Public Trust Act" -- NEVER introduced by the Legislature, No Senate or Assembly Sponsors, No Senate or Assembly Bill Numbers

Dear Mr. Schick & Ms. Arbetter:

Kindly explain why I have not heard back from you in response to my below July 23rd email entitled : "NEWS LEAD: 'Public Trust Act' – NEVER introduced by the Legislature, No Senate or Assembly Sponsors, No Senate or Assembly Bill Numbers".

This is all the more surprising as I have since discovered at least two additional segments of your Capitol Reports which should have made you further enthusiastic about the NEWS LEAD. For your convenience, I've transcribed them below:

April 25, 2013: "Where's the bills?"

"Governor Andrew Cuomo says he was kidding with reporters when he said 'normally when we release bill language before an agreement, it means the probability of that bill passing is very, very low.'

The Governor clarified the statement the next day on the Capital Pressroom radio show. 'You have a little fun and then they take it seriously. Some bills are for press releases, and some bills are good faith proposals, and some are just posturing. And that was the point I was trying to make.' [4/18/13: "clarifying comments regarding the release of proposed laws for review"]

But it is not the first time the administration has given us a peek at how they'd like to handle lawmaking. Lt. Governor Robert Duffy said this to business leaders last week. 'The Governor doesn't like to announce what he wants to do, he likes to announce what he gets done.' And if you look at the statement, when it comes to actual bills proposed outside of the budget, it's true. Widely reported numbers released by NYPIRG showed that this year, so far, the governor has only put out one program bill – the Safe Act.

[Bob Bellafiore, former spokesman for Governor Pataki] 'It shows fear. It shows that I'm afraid of getting attacked on the details of what I believe'.

The NYPIR numbers shows that in 2012 the governor put out 58 bills and in 2011, the number was 45.

But it is the details that could hold up one of the governor's key proposals. The Women's Equality Agenda'. It is a plan that includes a provision related to abortion, but no bill has been released.

[Steve Greenberg, former spokesman to Comptroller Carl McCall] 'This is a subject where a comma, a word, an and versus an or, makes a big, big difference.'

At the Capitol, in Albany, I'm Curtis Schick."

April 30, 2013 "Cuomo details first reform":

"Earlier this month, the Governor used this metaphor to explain how corruption is infecting Albany. 'This is not just about a very specific case, right? This is not about a bad shingle. This is about a bad roof.'

So let the house building begin.

Monday, the Governor released the details of his first piece of reform legislation. The proposed 'Public Trust Act' stays true to his initial proposal by creating three specific crimes for public officials: bribery, being a player in government corruption, and not reporting corruption.

At the Capitol, in Albany, I'm Curtis Schick"

Is it possible that you are not interested in examining the odyssey of the "Public Trust Act", or examining the creation of the Moreland Commission to Investigate Public Corruption – or examining how D.A. Soares handles a corruption complaint against New York's highest constitutional and public officers in Albany, who you routinely cover?

Please advise – and let me know how I can assist you as a source for upcoming stories.

Certainly, it seems that notwithstanding you are part of WCNY.ORG -- a viewer-supported, PBS affiliate -- you are NO different than other media which disdains and rejects good-government, citizen activists as sources for developing stories. Is this correct?

Thank you.

Subject: NEWS LEAD: "Public Trust Act" -- NEVER introduced by the Legislature, No Senate or Assembly Sponsors, No Senate or Assembly Bill Numbers

Dear Mr. Schick,

Following up our brief phone conversation this morning, here's the direct link to the webpage of our website, www.judgewatch.org, posting our July 19th corruption complaint to Albany District Attorney Soares: <http://www.judgewatch.org/web-pages/judicial-compensation/albany-da.htm>. The complaint sets forth scandalous background facts to Governor Cuomo's establishment of the Moreland Commission to Investigate Public Corruption – completely unreported.

It is NOT simply that the Legislature "failed to act" on Governor Cuomo's "Public Trust Act" ("Program Bill #3). Rather, Assembly Speaker Silver and Majority Coalition Leaders Skelos and Klein WITHHELD the "Public Trust Act" from the legislators, such that it was NOT introduced, NOT assigned Senate or Assembly bills numbers, and had NO Senate or Assembly sponsors. The same is true of Governor Cuomo's subsequent "program bills" (#4, #5, #12) which he included in his corruption-fighting package.

Did Governor Cuomo not know that Speaker Silver and Majority Coalition Leaders Skelos and Klein were withholding his legislation? Wasn't he negotiating with them, behind-closed-doors, throughout this period? Didn't he ask them what was happening? Didn't they tell him? Wasn't he in contact with other legislators?

This breach of public trust, on all sides – in failing to enact the "Public Trust Act", no less – requires press follow-up. Can we count on you to investigate and report? Or will it be done by District Attorney Soares?

We're giving you the lead on this because WCNY.ORG is a viewer-supported, PBS affiliate – and because the story of the "Public Trust Act", embodied by our July 19th corruption complaint to D.A. Soares, is a perfect follow-up to your July 15th Capitol Report entitled "The never-ending culture of corruption". It featured Susan Arbetter's interview of D.A. Soares and opened with his words:

"We have an institution that is completely resistant to policing itself, to passing any bit of legislation that is going to improve the public's sense of confidence...We go through legislative session after legislative session, and we do not move that ball."

You may be sure that had we known of the July 15th Capitol Report before sending our July 19th complaint to D.A. Soares, we would have quoted it in the complaint. As it is, we are featuring it at the top of our webpage for the July 19th complaint.

Please let us hear from you and/or Ms. Arbetter by no later than the end of the day tomorrow so that we may know whether to move on to other journalists.

Thank you.
