Dear Ms. Sassower,

I felt I had responded to you this morning when I asked Ms. Abrams to tell you:

- 1) I saw no reason for running your most recent letter to the editor, and;
- 2) I had passed on your other information to the appropriate editors and reporters.

Your letter to the editor contained several misleading statements about the newspaper and would take an extensive editor's note to set the facts straight if we chose to publish it, which we do not. Your other letter included several phrases that could be construed as character assassination. It is the policy of this paper not to publish letters that include this sort of language.
