Dear Elaina,

In your recent letter, you asked for several things:

- * That I inform you by May 8 – happy birthday, by the way – whether I will be writing a story. I told you previously that I was not inclined to write about this and that discussing it at length on the telephone was a waste of my time and yours. Nothing has changed.
- * That if I decline to write about your issue that I forward your materials to my superiors. I am not going to serve as your courier. If you wish, I will return your materials to you promptly. But if you want to provide documents to others, that is your concern and your responsibility, not mine.
- * That I track down whatever materials you left with Kris Fischer at the Law Journal. I am not going to attempt to chase down documents that you left with someone else.

John Caher
