As I said I would, I yesterday went to The Times' headquarters to deliver a signed original of my above-attached letter to Publisher Sulzberger. I arrived shortly after 12 pm and was told by the security guard/concierge that he could not take the letter and that, it being the weekend, there was no New York Times personnel to take it.

Here's a photo of me, with the envelope containing the letter, in front of The Times' headquarters. My hair doesn't usually look so disheveled, but the wind was blowing.

I'll be mailing the letter.

This morning I discovered The Times' interview of Mr. Sulzberger, published yesterday, entitled "Free Press, Free People" – and my letter is equally a rebuttal to it.

Thank you.
